Many have been the speculations with regard to the civilisation of China, as to whence it cometh whither it tendeth. There are not wanting those who question her claim being possessed of a civilisation at all. Is China civilised in the sense in which the word is generally accepted, or is her civilisation a thin veneer which scarcely serves to hide the barbarism of the Mongol and the Tartar? Is she capable and willing to undertake international obligations? Is she fit for admission into the family of lightened nations? Is she sufficiently cultivated to enter the diplomatic drawing-room, or must she still be sent to the kitchen as the hardly presentable relative, who, to say the best of it, is apt to utter things and do defendant alleged had not been made according | Singapore. A murder was committed some ten days ago in the outer city in a most ingenious manner. A gentlemanarrived at an inn belonging to a Tientsin man in a cart with his driver and one attendant. The innkeeper at once sent for the authorities who opened the hox and were borrified to find the body of a man which had been out up and slowed in it. It is supposed that the driver and the attendant murdered the muster for the sake of his goods, and that when the cart left there were only two men with it instead of three; but that the absence of one was not noticed amid the bustle of the inn. The remains have not been identified, so as yet there is no clue to the murderers. Meantime, the innkeeper has been arrested, and will probably have to pay dearly for having unconsciously harboured such rufflans, for it is all grist that comes to the mandarin mill in China. The naunt letharqy of our daily routine received a while some atimulant in the appearance of an Express, notifying a audden and unexpected rise in rates generally. Shippers began to grumble that no notice had been given them, and complained that the increase had not only been too hasty but too high a jump, all at once. Chinese shippers do not seem to view the change of affairs very calculy. No doubt many of them have been calculating on the low-rate tariff lasting some time longer, and this ornel demolition of their little game has been the cause of much wailing. ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

MOR comprehensiveness and practical service I this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the Agents for the above Company, are pro- following facts are submitted for consideration. pured to GRANT INSURANCES at Current Chalmers' Vocabularly contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chineso Dictionary about 100,000, whilst Agents, Royal Insurance Company. this work contains more than 50,000 English Press Office, or to the following Agents:words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese charac.
